Convex optimization Wikipedia

Convex optimization is a subfield of optimization that studies the problem of minimizing convex functions over convex sets. The convexity makes optimization easier than the general case since a local minimum must be a global minimum , and first-order conditions are sufficient conditions for optimality.

Convex Analysis and Minimization Algorithms [97] is a comprehensive but gentler introduction. Our goal is not to supplant these works, but on the contrary to promote them, and thereby to motivate future researchers. This book aims to make converts. vii. viii Preface We try to be succinct rather than systematic, avoiding becoming bogged down in technical details. Our style is relatively
