Nevertheless it is part of the modest intent that recourse to Hume and Hegel in arguments pertaining to human nature will be better informed and more discriminating as a consequence of this study. Additionally, some distinctions herein made also shed light on some assumptions made in contemporary debates in the philosophy of social science, especially those concerning the understanding ferences between them, Hume, Hegel and Vico shared the belief that knowledge of human history presupposes a theory of human nature or of the development of human nature. According to Hume, knowledge of human history is impossible unless it presupposes the constancy of human nature or of human consciousness and is grounded upon an experimental knowledge of the latter
